Psalm 8:3–4, 24:1–3, 89:5–6; 1 Peter 1:13–16; Colossians 3:9–10

ABOUT THIS WEEK

Standing at the base of a towering mountain or gazing out from its summit can leave us speechless, but nothing compares to the wonder of God's holiness. This week, we'll look at God's unmatched power and be reminded to reflect that holiness in our lives. When we recognize just how distinct God's character is, it's no wonder that we worship because God is holy.

WHAT?

One of the most well-known wonders is Mount Everest. Many people travel to see it each year, and thousands attempt to climb it. Like the climb to Mount Everest, our faith is something we want to experience. We want to feel like we're in a relationship with God and not just going through the motions. As we learn to truly experience our faith, we'll see that worship isn't about singing the "right" songs or feeling the "right" emotions. It's about what happens when we give in to wonder.

SO WHAT?

If we want to understand worship and why we do it, we can look to the psalms that use creation and nature as a lens to talk about who God is.

Psalm 24:1–3, 89:5–6, and 8:3–4 remind us God is holy, apart from all of creation. No one, and nothing in creation, is more important or even on the same level as God. But 1 Peter 1:13–16 invites us to try and live in a way that reflects God's holiness.

Worship is how we respond to our moments with God. We aren't God and won't ever be, but we can worship by trying to be more like God. We worship because God is holy.

NOW WHAT?

All of creation has witnessed God's holiness. Now, we're invited to experience this for ourselves and respond in worship. Like a Sherpa guiding us to the top of Mount Everest, God invites us to keep moving forward on our journey to grow in our faith. How do we get started?

- DECIDE: Take the first step and choose to live differently.
- STOP: Turn away from things that keep us from getting closer to God.
- START: Replace those habits with something better that helps us live out holiness in the world.

We can look at the world around us and respond in worship. We worship because God is holy.
